Conflict Minerals Policy

I.

Introduction

The US Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) adopted rules under the 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act for reporting and disclosing “conflict minerals” in response to violence and human rights violations in the mining of certain minerals from conflicted areas situated in the eastern portion of the Democratic Republic of Congo and 9 of its adjoining countries (collectively, the “DRC”). The rules require manufacturers who file reports with the SEC to disclose whether the product they manufacture or contract to manufacture contain “conflict minerals” that are “necessary to the functionality or production” of those products. The conflict minerals are gold, tantalum, tin, and tungsten. The SEC rules also require companies to disclose their supply chain inquiries to verify whether or not the conflict minerals originated in the DRC.

Our Policy

Essex Furukawa, including its subsidiaries, supports the humanitarian goal of ending violence in the DRC and is committed to the responsible sourcing of conflict minerals throughout its supply chain. Accordingly, Essex Furukawa has adopted this conflict minerals policy (“Policy”) and expects all of its suppliers to adopt a similar policy and meet the expectations set forth herein. In support of this Policy, Essex Furukawa will only purchase products containing conflict minerals that are DRC conflict free¹. Essex Furukawa has conducted due diligence regarding all of the products it manufactures and distributes to determine the presence of any conflict minerals and where they are sourced.

¹ “DRC conflict free” means that a product does not contain conflict minerals necessary to the functionality or production of that product that directly or indirectly finance or benefit armed groups as defined in SEC Rule 13p under the SEC Act of 1934.

The background of the slide features a photograph of several large stacks of cardboard boxes, likely for shipping or storage. The boxes are stacked in a way that creates a sense of depth and volume. The lighting is warm, highlighting the texture of the cardboard. The text is overlaid on a semi-transparent white box that covers the lower portion of the image.
